

M.P. Radio — Launch Standard: No Rough Edges

For Claude Code, the Design tool, and anyone building or reviewing any part of mpradio.fm. Sept 27, 2026. This document sets the bar; the Launch Readiness Brief says what to build and the master documents say what the facts are.

Who this is being built for

The first people to see this platform are not casual friends. They are the owner's professional network of 18 years — working DJs, musicians, comedians, and promoters from the Rock-a-Way era onward. People with reputations, who have seen real platforms, who will judge this in the first ten seconds, and who talk to each other.

One rough experience and that person is gone, and so is everyone they would have told.

There is no soft launch. The first person who sees it is the launch.

Definition of done — every item must be true before anyone gets the link

#	Standard	How it's verified
1	Nothing an entertainer can touch is half-built. No placeholder image, no placeholder text, no "coming soon", no empty section, no broken link anywhere they can reach	Click every link and button on a real phone, then on desktop
2	Prices are exactly right everywhere they appear — homepage, tier cards, profile pages, checkout, confirmation email. $10 base tier (+15% booking commission), $20 DJ, $25 Extra, $5 direct referral	Cross-check every price on the page against 3-MP-Radio-Master.pdf
3	Checkout works end to end with a real card, and the confirmation looks as professional as the site	A real test purchase, then refund
4	The example profile page looks like a page a working artist would be proud to send out — real photo, real bio, genre tags, Buy Dubs, show time. No stand-in content	Owner reviews it on a phone and would send it themselves
5	Listen Live plays within a second of pressing it, on phone and desktop	Tested on cellular, not just Wi-Fi
6	The station is never empty — at least one show on the schedule and something playing	Open the site at a random time; something is on
7	The site installs to a phone home screen as an app (PWA) with the real logo and opens full-screen	Tested on a real Android phone and a real iPhone
8	Look and feel reads as official and funded — real photography or properly styled art, depth, animation, a considered type hierarchy. Never a wireframe	Compare against the Design canvas; if it looks less finished than the mockup, it isn't done

9	Brand is right: multi-genre entertainer platform, not a reggae station. Navy #041E42 / Green #4CAF50 / White. No "AI-powered" copy. The real M.P. Radio logo, not a placeholder mark	Read the copy and the genre tags out loud; check the header

If any one item is not true, the link does not go out. Not "mostly done". Not "we'll fix it after they see it".

Rules for the builder

- Verify on a real phone before claiming anything is done. A screenshot from a desktop browser is not verification.
- Never invent a number, a name, a price, or a feature. Every fact comes from the four master documents. If something is missing there, ask — don't fill the gap.
- Build from the Design canvas as the visual target. Do not simplify it to make the code easier.
- No shortcuts that show: no default fonts where the design specifies otherwise, no unstyled buttons, no flat blocks where the design has depth.
- If a part cannot be finished to this standard yet, it does not appear on the live site at all. Hide it completely rather than show it unfinished.
- When something is called lazy, repetitive, or not what was asked: look again honestly and fix it. Do not explain why the original was reasonable.

Why this bar is this high

Everything else in the plan — hand-held onboarding, the strategic funnel, the flat $5 referral, the packages with verified numbers, the look and feel — is decided and on record. The entertainers are not the risk. Losing information and shipping something unfinished are the only two ways this fails. This document exists to remove the second one.
